

date and which is even more sudden. Of course we refer to the gentleman who so lately as "Decorated Day," 1875, told an admiring crowd of "friends" at an up-town hotel that the stock of the Western Union Telegraph Company was not worth 50 per cent, and would not stop declining until after it had sold under that price—the price the Saturday before had declined and closed at 7 1/2 per cent—but who upon later investigations, with the price at "81 ex dividend," has discovered the value to be near par, and accordingly hastens to correct the bad advice he "unwittingly" gave at 7 1/2, by telling his friends to buy in the midst of all this hubbub permit me, Mr. Editor, to congratulate the press upon its prospective prosperity, if it is to become the general practice of stock-brokers to thus advertise their wares when they wish to sell them.
